U.S. WIRELESS CHAIN TO TOUCH AT SAN DIEGO

[By Latest Mail]

SAN DIEGO, Cal. — Rear-admiral Robert S. Griffin, chief of the bureau of construction, Washington, D. C., announces that the navy department has changed its proposals of establishing a chain of wireless stations to complete radio communication between the national capital and Manila. Wireless stations at Guam and Samoa are to be eliminated and high-power stations will be erected at San Diego, Panama, Honolulu and Manila, the Union announces.

The station on the isthmus, which will be located at Darien, will be completed about Jan. 1, 1915, according to present plans. Recent experiments at the Arlington radio station, opposite Washington, showed that it was able to pick up messages sent from a Poulsen arc set of radio instruments at Honolulu. The Poulsen station on top of the U. S. Grant hotel during the last seven months has established daylight communication with stations on the Gulf of Mexico.

As the radio operators at Point Loma nightly converse with the station at Arlington, the powerful new station that will soon be built at Cholos Heights should be able to communicate direct with Manila, say naval experts. They point out that when the San Diego and Manila stations are completed a message can be dispatched from Washington and relayed via San Diego to Manila within 30 seconds after the local operator has acknowledged the message from the capital.

San Diego is also to be the distributing point of all official messages destined not only for the Hawaiian
